Acknowledgements

I wish to thank Bloomsbury editors Laura Murray, David Avital, James Tupper and the project manager Subitha Nair for all their help in bringing this book to print. Thanks also to Colleen Coalter for her professional support when this book was just a proposal.

My most important debt of gratitude is to Maggie Gee whose interest in my work, comments, suggestions and her friendship made the normally stressful time of writing a very rewarding experience. I am also grateful to her for giving permission to publish the interview of April 2010, İstanbul, as well as generously agreeing to another one, on women and writing, which will be published separately in the Oxford Journal Contemporary Women's Writing. Special thanks to Maggie Gee and Nicholas Rankin for their hospitality during my short research visit to London, and the sources they provided. They made me feel very lucky and very happy!

Writing while teaching full time was a challenge. But I am grateful to Professor Dilek Doltaş and Assistant Professor Oya Berk for their support and encouragement, which allowed me to finish the project on time. Grateful thanks to my colleagues and friends at Doğuş University for their support, interest and comments, especially to Murat Sayım and Hülya Yağcıoğlu who always helped not only with their ideas but also with books, articles and essays.

I am grateful to GEMMA, Erasmus Mundus Master's Degree Programme in Women's and Gender Studies in Europe, for their Visiting Scholar Scheme, which enabled me to share my research with their brilliant students and do a lot of reading and research at the University of Bologna and the University of Granada in 2011. Special thanks to Professor Adelina Sánchez Espinosa and Professor Vita Fortunati for their support and interest in the seminars I offered for GEMMA. I am also grateful to the ESSE, The European Society for the Study of English, for the bursary that helped me reach the sources at the British Library.

Thanks to my friends and colleagues Dr Sema Taşkın and Dr Olu Jenzen for reading and commenting invaluable on some of the chapters despite their research and heavy teaching schedules. The careful technical help that Müge Tekin kindly offered enabled me to spend more time on writing in the last stages: Many thanks for that!

And infinite thanks to my family, Leman, Kemal, Can, Emine, Buse Özyurt and Bülent, for always being there to share the joys, as well as the pains, of writing!
